

Special Issue

Religion, Conflict Transformation, and Peacebuilding: New Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will bring together papers which advance the theoretical and practical understanding of how religion can positively contribute to peacebuilding, conflict transformation, conflict prevention, and reconciliation processes. The roles of religion and religious actors in peacebuilding and reconciliation have received increasing attention, yet this is an area which is still significantly underdeveloped in terms of methodological rigor and theoretical sophistication. The aim of this SI is to encourage debate about the future directions of religious peacebuilding, and new perspectives and approaches which can help advance knowledge and understanding in this important subject area. The SI will bring together scholars from a variety of disciplines and welcome papers that explore fresh interdisciplinary perspectives and developments, and offer new methodological approaches. This will lead to greater interdisciplinary understanding of how faith-based groups and religious actors can most effectively use their religious, spiritual, and cultural capital to bring about peace with justice.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
