

Special Issue

Religion, Gender and Sexuality

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Religions is devoted to an exploration of the intersection of religion, gender and sexuality, while taking into account the multiple social variables and the changing expression of religion in diverse social and cultural contexts. Scholars are invited to analyze and reflect critically on matters related to religion, gender and sexuality as social categories, especially revealing how identities intersect in their social ordering and in their manifestation of power and dominance. Scholars are invited to draw on feminist theories of intersectionality, gender, human rights, queer, masculinity, social construction and diversity studies as well as to demonstrate how interdisciplinary the subjects of religion, gender and sexuality are and how both academics and individuals outside of academia connect on these topical issues.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
