

Special Issue

Theology and Disability: Inclusion in Religious Communities

Message from the Guest Editor

The aim of the Special Issue is to engage the focus on disability as it relates to the scope of the journal Religions. In particular, this issue meets the aims of Religions in its consideration of religious thought and practice, hermeneutics, constructive practices, theology, religious ethics, and religion and health. The subject areas to be engaged include theology, religious ethics, the role of religion in culture and society, theoretical and/or practical considerations, and religion and health through the lens of theologically informed disability studies. In particular, this Special Issue aims to engage with the experiences of people with disability and their engagement with natural non-human environments and concern for the sustainability of the planet. Original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following suggested themes:

- Research area A: Welcome and Sustainability
- Research area B: Inclusion and Participation
- Research area C: Engaging Natural Environments
- Research area D: Thinking Together
- Research area E: Moving Forward, etc.[..]

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
