Muslim Da 'Wah and Christian Mission. New Perspectives in the Global Interfaith Context

Message from the Guest Editors

Both Islam and Christianity are fundamentally missionary religions, with their missions at the core of their beliefs. We are pleased to invite you to explore the dynamics of the Muslim Da 'wah and Christian mission, offering a comprehensive analysis of the interplay between these two religious practices in the contemporary global context characterized by religious plurality and interfaith dialogue. It is evident that both forms of religious expression demonstrate a robust association with tradition, concomitant with a genuine openness to dialogue.

This Special Issue welcomes scholars to reflect on aspects, examples, and systematic elaborations of the Muslim Da 'wah and Christian mission, analyzing their potential for nurturing identity and dialogue. Possible topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- Christian theology of their mission;
- Muslim theology of their mission (Da 'wah);
- Comparative mission theology;
- Hermeneutics of missiological texts;
- Witnesses to the Christian mission and Muslim Da 'wah and their relations;
- Controversial aspects of the Christian mission or Da 'wah and their developments.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
