

Special Issue

Religion and Indigenous Traditions

Message from the Guest Editors

We invite researchers and practitioners to submit original research papers that explore Indigenous traditions at the intersection of religious studies and/or theology. This call acknowledges the geo-political nuances in framing indigeneity in the contexts of religious studies. We welcome submissions across a wide range of topics and regional areas related to religion and Indigenous traditions. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Research area A: Revitalizing and/or reconciling Indigenous practices and beliefs.
- Research area B: Decolonizing religious studies and theology.
- Research area C: Theoretical or methodological discussions.

We look forward to receiving your contributions. Yours faithfully,

Guest Editors

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
