Religious Filter Bubbles? The Influence of Religion on Mediated Public Sphere

Message from the Guest Editors

A series of comprehensive monographs focusing on the relationship between religion and media have been published in recent decades, which indicate the expansion and diversity of research. The purpose of the special issue of the journal Religions, Religious Filter Bubbles? - The Influence of Religion on Mediated Public Sphere, is to provide a comprehensive picture and a related typology of the effects of religion on traditional and online media and public sphere.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
