Challenges and (Dis)continuities in the Debates on Religion on Both Sides of the Atlantic

Message from the Guest Editors

Focusing on the so-called Western countries, we hereby invite you to contribute to highlighting challenges and continuities in the discussion of religion in the modern world. While religion is present in the lives of people and, surprisingly, beyond the theory of secularization amongst many young people, its forms, livelihood, and adaptations to modernity, local and/or transnational communities, families, and individual experiences are influenced by daily-life experiences, as well as unexpected variables, such as COVID-19.

Beyond the specificities of each local context in which the debate on religion and the different aspects of religiosity develops, similarities can be traced in the Western context and from both two sides of the Atlantic.

In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Religious identities;
- Religious behavior;
- Legal religious framework;

We look forward to receiving your contributions

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
