

Special Issue

Muslim Identity Formation in Contemporary Societies

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will critically analyse the intellectual efforts to advance diverse understandings of Muslim identity formation in the wake of new social, cultural, political, intellectual, and technological developments. The Special Issue invites scholars of Islam, field experts, early researchers, and independent scholars from relevant field disciplines to submit original articles on the topic. Possible themes and topics include:

- Qur'anic and Prophetic understandings of identity, difference, and pluralism
- migration, citizenship, and belonging
- identity formation and state politics
- the umma, trans-locality, and Muslim cosmopolitanism
- Muslim identity politics
- hybrid identities
- the impact of Islamophobia on the formation of Muslim identities
- the projection and representation of Muslims in the media
- securitisation of Muslim identities
- religious identity of young Muslims
- Muslim identities in the digital sphere
- group identities and Muslim subcultures
- intersectionality
- Muslim converts

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
