Political Theology: The Next Generation

Message from the Guest Editor

I am pleased to invite you to contribute to this Special Issue of Religions, titled “Political Theology: The Next Generation”. This Special Issue aims at exploring the range of political theologies within the broader scope of Abrahamic traditions, where critiques and affirmations of, and alternatives to, the secular, liberal political order are presented. Your contribution could be in a form of a critical theological analysis of a political project, literary or theoretical text, broader political thought, or innovative conceptual framing. This Special Issue aims to encourage theoretically, philosophically, and theologically driven as well as potentially empirically grounded scholarship on the role of political theology in the development of social and political engagement among Christian, Islamic, Jewish, and other traditions. Submitted articles should be between 8,000 and 10,000 words. This limitation is inclusive of the main document, references, tables, and figures. These limitations do not include appendices that will be published online. Papers shorter or longer than the set limitations are likely to be rejected without review.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
