

Special Issue

Nature Imagery in Biblical Wisdom

Message from the Guest Editor

Biblical wisdom literature employs much imagery drawn from nature, including floral, faunal, astral, and meteorological imagery. However, apart from a few studies of floral and faunal references in Song of Songs and scattered comments in biblical commentaries, this commonplace in wisdom writings has seldom been explored. In this issue, we hope to collect essays that look at nature imagery in biblical wisdom books, including the apocryphal/deuterocanonical books of Sirach and Wisdom of Solomon. We are soliciting papers that examine nature imagery in a particular book or a larger section of a book as well as papers that compare nature imagery across more than one wisdom book. It is hoped that a variety of papers that examine this issue will yield a more varied and inclusive view of nature imagery in biblical wisdom. Prof. Dr. Andrew E. Steinmann

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community – disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
