

Special Issue

Advances in Thermal Infrared Remote Sensing

Message from the Guest Editors

Thermal infrared (TIR) remote sensing plays an increasingly important role in Earth observation, especially with the intensifying global warming and drying. This Special Issue aims to invite papers focusing on recent advances in TIR remote sensing, with the goal of facilitating a better utilization of future TIR missions. Topics may range from theoretic modeling and algorithm development to different applications. Topics for this Special Issue include, but are not limited to:

- Land surface temperature retrieval and evaluation;
- Thermal infrared radiative transfer modeling;
- Surface energy balance modeling;
- Evapotranspiration and water stress;
- Surface radiation budget;
- Ecosystem functioning;
- Urban thermal environment;
- Geologic exploration.
