Remote Sensing for Flood Mapping and Monitoring of Flood Dynamics

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to collect studies and experiences aimed at aiding and advancing flood monitoring and mapping through remotely sensed data. The list below provides a general (but not exhaustive) overview of the topics that are solicited for this Special Issue: - Remote sensing data for flood hazard and risk mapping;

- Remote sensing techniques to monitor flood dynamics;
- The use of remotely sensed data for the calibration, or validation, of hydrological or hydraulic models;
- Data assimilation (DA) of remotely sensed data into hydrological and hydraulic models;
- Improvement of river discretization and monitoring by means of satellite based observations;
- River flows estimation by means of remote sensed observations.
- River and flood dynamics estimation from satellite (especially time lag, flow velocity, etc.)

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Remote Sensing is now a prominent international journal of repute in the world of remote sensing and spatial sciences, as a pioneer and pathfinder in open access format. It has highly accomplished global remote sensing scientists on the editorial board and a dedicated team of associate editors. The journal emphasizes quality and novelty and has a rigorous peerreview process. It is now one of the top remote sensing journals with a significant Impact Factor, and a goal to become the best journal in remote sensing in the coming years. I strongly recommend Remote Sensing for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
