Safety and Risk Management in Process Industries

Message from the Guest Editors

Safety and risk management within process industries are of paramount importance in terms of safeguarding human lives, preserving the environment, and protecting valuable assets, all the while ensuring the uninterrupted and efficient operation of these industries. This Special Issue endeavors to deepen our understanding of the myriad challenges and opportunities within the realm of process safety. It provides a platform for researchers, practitioners, and policymakers to share invaluable insights and groundbreaking innovations. Through the collaboration of multidisciplinary perspectives, we strive to advance the state of knowledge in this critical field, ultimately contributing to the secure, sustainable, and prosperous future of process industries. This Special Issue titled “Safety and Risk Management in Process Industries” serves as a comprehensive platform for the exchange of knowledge, research findings, and innovative approaches related to safety and risk management in various process industries.
