Water Resources Protection: Water Safety

Message from the Guest Editor

It is well recognized that drinking water safety, to be achieved through appropriate treatment of raw water abstracted from surface and groundwater sources, is of paramount importance. Thus, this Special Issue focuses on a number of carefully selected contemporary issues on water resources protection and water safety. The objective is to disseminate rapidly the latest research and knowledge in this important area. The following areas are of particular interest:

- Water resources protection
- Surface water supply
- Groundwater supply
- Drinking water contamination
- Water governance
- Public drinking water
