Editorial Board Members' Collection Series: Immunosensors

Message from the Guest Editors

Recent developments in the field of immunosensors related to the addition of nanomaterials for increased sensitivity, multiplexing or microfluidic devices can provide promising uses in industry and clinical trials. The main areas of application, along with biomedical analysis, are drug abuse control, food testing, and environmental analysis. Recently, new green approaches have been applied in this field, such as the use of recycled or no wasted materials. The aim of this Special Issue is to provide an opportunity for researchers to publish their new ideas and latest research related to advanced immunosensor technology with electrochemical detection.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
