

Special Issue

Data Engineering in the Internet of Things—Second Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to highlight data engineering techniques that are applied in the design, development, and assessment of IoT systems to prepare, transform, publish, or otherwise make available data for different IoT applications. We are receptive to a range of papers suitable for some aspects of IoT data engineering. For sharing and exchanging research and results to problems encountered in today's IoT data engineering practitioners and researchers, we especially encourage submissions that make efforts to encompass the following:

- The most recent research results in IoT data engineering;
- The most recent practice problems that arise in IoT data engineering;
- The exchange of experiences in IoT data engineering technologies;
- The new issues and directions for future research and development in IoT data engineering.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
