Recent Advance of IoT Healthcare Applications for E- health

Message from the Guest Editor

The impressive progress in sensors' availability, affordability, scope, and ease of use, combined with the opportunities brought forth by data science to put the vast amount of data collected to good use, makes a strong case for the development of IoT systems for the benefit of human health and wellbeing. The Internet of Things is a fundamental pillar of the developing field of P4 (predictive, personalized, preventive, participatory) Medicine. This Special Issue welcomes contributions reporting novel research related to the application of IoT and sensor systems in the field of healthcare, e-health, and m-health. We expect papers presenting advances in IoT-based healthcare systems, case studies and experience reports on the use IoT for health, or survey papers in one aspect of this cross-disciplinary field of study.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
