Advanced-Sensors-Based Emotion Sensing and Recognition

Message from the Guest Editor

Recently, emotion sensing and recognition has become one of the most popular topics in AI research, and many approaches to emotion recognition using various sensors have been widely explored and researched.

Advanced sensors can include cameras, smart phones, depth sensors, biometric sensors, wearable sensors, EEG/ECG/EMG sensors and many more. This Special Issue aims to collect in-depth research papers focused on emotion sensing and recognition that explore various advanced sensors, data modalities, their fusion, and classification. Topics and keywords include but are not limited to:

- Emotion recognition technologies;
- Emotion sensing technologies;
- Sensors-based emotion recognition/sensing;
- Artificial intelligence for emotion recognition/sensing;
- Sensor fusion for emotion recognition/sensing;
- Affective computing;
- Sensory data processing;
- Human-computer interaction
