Signal Processing for Brain-Computer Interfaces

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue shall focus on state-of-the-art noise removal, feature extraction, and classification techniques to improve the accuracy, reliability, information transfer rate, and general performance of BCI systems which may be based for invasive or non-invasive methods, for example, implanted electrodes, electrocorticography (ECoG), electroencephalography (EEG), functional near-infrared spectroscopy (fNIRS), and hybrid brain imaging techniques. Original research papers, clinical studies, and review papers which describe new research on signal processing for BCIs are all welcome. I look forward to your participation in this Special Issue.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
