

Special Issue

Wearable Sensors for Human Posture and Motion Recognition

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to present cutting-edge research on the development and application of wearable sensors for posture and motion recognition. We welcome the submission of papers on a wide range of topics, including multimodal sensor integration, machine learning for motion classification, clinical and sports-related applications, and methods to improve data standardization and interpretability. By highlighting both technological and methodological advancements, this Special Issue seeks to provide a platform for interdisciplinary collaboration and facilitate the translation of wearable sensor research into practical solutions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Sensors is a leading journal devoted to fast publication of the latest achievements of technological developments and scientific research in the huge area of physical, chemical and biochemical sensors, including remote sensing and sensor networks. Both experimental and theoretical papers are published, including all aspects of sensor design, technology, proof of concept and application. Sensors organizes Special Issues devoted to specific sensing areas and applications each year.
