Message from the Guest Editors

Plastic pollution and pervasive micro(nano)plastic (MP/NP) fragments have gained recognition globally as emerging environmental problems in ecosystems. It is necessary to make advances in methodologies suitable for the separation and analysis of micro(nano)plastics and associated chemicals in environmental, food, and human samples. Manuscripts dedicated to (1) MP/NP and associated chemicals sources, occurrence, distribution and properties; (2) analytical approaches in representative environmental, food, and human matrices; (3) techniques for detection and identification; (4) impacts on ecosystems and human health; and (5) strategies to manage and mitigation are welcome.

Deadline for manuscript
submissions:
