Embodiment and Engagement of Tourism with Social Sustainability

Message from the Guest Editor

In contemporary times, tourism has emerged as a global phenomenon that not only drives economic growth but also significantly impacts social and environmental aspects. The interaction between tourism and social sustainability has become a crucial topic in academic research and policy formulation. The concept of social sustainability in tourism encompasses dimensions beyond economics and the environment, also considering the well-being of local communities, social justice, and equity in opportunities. This Special Issue aims to gather a variety of theoretical and methodological perspectives that enrich our understanding of how tourism can positively contribute to social sustainability. By fostering interdisciplinary dialog, we aim to advance towards more inclusive and ethical tourism practices that not only preserve but also enrich the social and cultural contexts in which they operate.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
