Communication Strategies for Building Global Food Networks

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will focus on the role of communication within food networks. What are the roles and processes of communication in food systems at local, national, and international levels? What are the systemic communication challenges in food systems? What are the opportunities for challenging inequalities? How do we define the meaning of “food” and the cultural importance of food within food systems? How does and can communication help to make these narratives visible? What are the voices of participants in food networks? How can communication function to increase the reach and scope of marginalized voices? Where are the communication, knowledge and information gaps in global food systems? At what level do they take place? Where are the opportunities for action? What is the effect of the changing the global context on communication and food systems? What are the opportunities for different communication actors and processes to remedy these challenges? This Special Issue welcomes diverse submissions that address one or more of the themes in this call.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
