Participatory Arts-Based Research Approaches with People with Disabilities: Cultural Contexts and Intersectional Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will explore participatory arts-based research approaches that engage individuals with disabilities as active research collaborators across diverse cultural contexts and intersectional identities. Specifically, this Issue will focus on:

- Participatory arts-based approaches where individuals with disabilities are co-researchers and co-creators throughout the research process.
- Cultural adaptations and contextual sensitivity in designing and implementing participatory arts-based approaches across diverse communities.
- Intersectional applications examining how participatory arts-based approaches can reveal and address the complex interplay between disability and other aspects of identity (e.g., gender, ethnicity, and sexuality).
- Participatory arts-based approaches such as photovoice and bodymapping that enable the voices of culturally diverse individuals with disabilities.
- Methodological adaptations, ethical considerations, and power dynamics when conducting cross-cultural participatory arts-based research with individuals with disabilities.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
