Gender and Class: Exploring the Intersections of Power and Inequality

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will apply a transnational lens to unravelling how social norms that shape everyday life are formed through the intersection of multiple factors including: class, ethnicity, age, gender, and cultural and religious values and beliefs. Specifically, articles in this edition will explore how social and gendered norms, heavily shaped by these multitude of factors, translate into hierarchies of power that not only limit the life opportunities for women and girls but also cause them harm. The articles will all take a similar methodological approach but focus on starkly different political-economic contexts including contexts impacted by climate crises. In doing so, the edition will be able to argue that, whilst norms are shaped by different factors and to different degrees, they are fundamentally gendered to perpetrate the power of some and to marginalise others.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
