The Mobilization of Social Justice and Gender Equality

Message from the Guest Editor

The intersections of social justice and gender equity are at the forefront of many political, academic, and social discussions. Oftentimes, social justice is portrayed as a single idea without considering numerous social justice theories (e.g., distributive, interactional, restorative, procedural, and transitional) and acknowledging that gender transcends the man/woman binary. Thus, this Special Issue will apply an intersectional lens to explore how social justice theories can be used to understand the realities of women, girls, and gender diverse individuals. It aims to unpack the social norms that result in gender inequities by analyzing the intersections of gender with societal and social factors such as class, race, sexual orientation, ethnicity, age, cultural heritage, religion, and more. Specifically, using social justice and intersectionality as a lens, the articles in this Special Issue will explore how political, societal, economic, and institutional injustices give rise to gender-based inequities, often resulting in harm. The goal of this Special Issue is to address the multitude of factors that result in gender inequities.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
