Critical Disability Studies, a Social Theory and Praxis Supporting Changes in Socio-Political Conditions of Social Exclusion of People with Disabilities

Message from the Guest Editor

This call for papers seeks to identify, from these interdisciplinary and intersectionality approaches, certain anchor points of the socio-political conditions associated with the contemporary construction of disability and their transformations. From the same perspective, queer theory and critical disability theory today constitute a key paradigm sustained by an intersectional analysis of the disability mosaic and the forms of oppression and experience of other marginalized groups. This articulation will be explored and discussed in this Special Issue. Therefore, submitted articles could address these issues both theoretically and from an emancipatory perspective, particularly those involving experiential knowledge, to bring to the fore new forms of inequality and the social exclusion of people with disabilities. Authors wishing to contribute to these conceptual, methodological, and empirical developments are welcome to submit papers. Contributions have to follow one of the three categories of papers (article, conceptual paper or review) of the journal and address the topic of the Special Issue.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
