Doing and Critically Evaluating Participatory Action Research in Migration Studies

Message from the Guest Editors

The present call for a Special Issue on the use of Participatory Action Research (PAR) within migration and integration studies is to be underpinned by theoretical contributions and new empirical research that broadens and further explores the use of PAR while critically assessing it in the field of migrant (post-)integration processes. The use of art-based events and peer researchers opens spaces for active and creative participation in the co-construction of new knowledge and innovative ways of constructing meaning about migration/integration experiences. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following: theoretical papers on PAR in migration and integration studies; empirical papers on PAR in migration and integration studies; comparisons of the use of PAR in migration and integration studies; papers on specific art-based events in migration and integration studies; papers on peer researchers in migration and integration studies.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
