

Special Issue

Home and Second Home: A Case of Eastern-European Diaspora

Message from the Guest Editor

The purpose of this Special Issue is to contribute to the expanding social science literature that seeks to enhance our understanding of contemporary migration, integration, and re-integration processes in general by studying them in the light of new forms of mobility characteristic to Eastern European migrants. It will complement the existing literature by offering a comparative sending-country perspective perspective with a focus on migrants own subjective feelings, perceptions, and identities. Potential topics of the papers include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Formation of attachments and home-making practices among Eastern European migrants;
- Transnationalism and/ or liquid migration and its consequences for migrants;
- The subjective well-being of migrants;
- Diasporic identities and factors affecting their formation;
- Migrant children: their well-being, education, and social inclusion;
- Subjective interpretations of 'integration';
- Social and professional ties and networks across border;
- Families at home and abroad;
- Civic and community engagement at home and abroad.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
