Capacity and Impact of Nonprofits in Rural Communities Addressing Social, Economic, and Racial Inequities

Message from the Guest Editors

Nonprofits in rural communities serve as safety nets for addressing pervasive social, economic, and racial inequities. Their leadership and innovation are stimulating change and growth in rural areas across the world; however, the empirical discussion of rural nonprofit impact and their organizational capacity to serve is minimal. To that end, this Special Issue of Societies invites original and conceptual articles examining nonprofits' roles in social, economic, and racial inequities in rural communities. Innovative strategies and case studies of rural nonprofit impact, as well as capacity issues and solutions, are especially encouraged. Articles may focus on any rural or remote area internationally, although it is suggested that authors provide contextual descriptions of their rural communities of study. Book reviews on the same topics are also welcome. To that end, this Special Issue of Societies invites original and conceptual articles examining nonprofits' roles in undertaking social, economic, and racial inequities in rural communities.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
