The Well-Being of Socially Vulnerable Groups in the Unsteadiness During Social Movements

Message from the Guest Editors

The global spread of modernity, and, with it, globalization, has resulted in an increasingly large number of human beings being deprived of the means necessary for their subsistence. In this changing environment or context, where Zygmunt Bauman's liquid society or Ulrich Beck's risk society appears, and in which society is built on a political, economic and social contract, the most vulnerable social groups face challenges or increasingly unprecedented challenges that affect their rights, well-being and health, while the tendency to exclude them from society thrives. In this sense, homeless people, immigrants and refugees, households living below the poverty line and minors at risk of social exclusion are considered vulnerable social profiles that may see their situation worsen in the context of recession, economic crisis, war or conflict or pandemics, such as COVID-19, among others. This call for manuscripts aims to analyze how these vulnerable social groups have been affected in the aforementioned contexts in certain areas, in a way that affects the quality of life, while analyzing the measures that have been adopted either by the State or the Third Sector.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
