Longitudinal Studies on Migrants' Families: From an Identity View

Message from the Guest Editor

Studies of migrant families' identity problems are among the most pressing topics of modern social sciences. The problem of migrant integration is directly related to the key issue of integrity and stability of the entire social system, counteracting its fragmentation, and disintegration into small, self-contained, incapable of understanding each other, mutual-solidarity, suspicious, and even warring communities and networks.

In order to find the right means of solving this problem, it is necessary to start with a deep study of the processes that occur in migrant families, who as a rule are experiencing a severe cultural upheaval from a sharp change in social environment, their social status, customs, and habits. A detailed study of the ongoing changes in their identity is the key to understanding the effectiveness of the entire integration process.

In this Special Issue, we welcome manuscripts of various types, such as articles, reviews, and conceptual papers of a disciplinary or interdisciplinary nature, that seek to contribute to analysis of longitudinal migrant family studies, from an identity perspective.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
