

Special Issue

Academic Computing and the Social Sciences

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue is devoted to expanding the dialogue between computing and the social sciences, one which continues the process of bringing together these two oft-separate horizons. This Special Issue would welcome contributions that theorize/historicize the relationship between computing and the social sciences, that provide practical illustrations of research that straddles these two domains, or that articulates educational approaches for doing so.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international open access peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences including anthropology, criminology, economics, education, geography, history, law, linguistics, political science, psychology, social policy, social work, sociology and related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to facilitate the interaction and communication between different social scientific disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles as well as shorter Research Notes or short articles, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
