

Special Issue

Exploring Social, Cultural, and Psychological Dimensions of Lived Experiences

Message from the Guest Editors

We are excited to announce a Special Issue in Social Sciences focused on understanding the social, cultural, and psychological dimensions of lived experiences. This collection brings together interdisciplinary perspectives that address critical issues such as mental health disparities, social justice, and cultural adaptability in diverse populations. Contributions will cover a range of topics, including LGBTQ+ identities in therapy, sustainability in rural tourism, workplace gender dynamics, and the experiences of marginalized groups as they navigate systemic barriers. The Special Issue aims to shed light on how individuals and communities negotiate their identities, relationships, and roles within complex sociocultural systems. This Special Issue serves as a platform to explore the interplay of social, cultural, and psychological factors that shape human experiences. By fostering dialog among researchers and practitioners, we hope to inspire innovative solutions and deepen understanding of how these factors impact diverse communities. Join us in advancing scholarship that promotes equity, inclusion, and transformative change.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international open access peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences including anthropology, criminology, economics, education, geography, history, law, linguistics, political science, psychology, social policy, social work, sociology and related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to facilitate the interaction and communication between different social scientific disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles as well as shorter Research Notes or short articles, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
