

Special Issue

Democracy, Politics and Innovation, Social Integration and Global Politics in the Contemporary World

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue centers on a cross-disciplinary dialogue about fast-moving changes in society, the economy, and democracy. Analyses can focus on nation-states, regions, or operate within a comparative framework, or concentrate on the global system as a whole. Global disruptions and global politics have effects and do matter. Key issues include climate change, gender and social equality, aging populations, migration, and the ethical governance of digital transformation and artificial intelligence. There is a growing need to understand how technology influences society, the economy, and democratic systems. Additionally, fostering innovation, exploring alternative economic models, and utilizing art as a catalyst for social transformation are crucial for navigating these complex global shifts. Interested prospective authors should connect directly with the Dr. David F.J. Campbell (Asso. Prof. at University of Vienna, Email: david.campbell@univie.ac.at) and submit a first tentative abstract (with title and keywords).

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international, open access, peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences, including anthropology, economics, law, linguistics, education, geography, history, political science, psychology, sociology, and other related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to encourage creative, innovative, and critical reflections across social science disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles, shorter Research Notes or articles, as well as Special Issue submissions, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
