

Special Issue

Has Consumption Ruined the City?

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue is concerned with how the relationship between consumption, identity, space and place is actually manifested in cities. We are seeking contributions from across the Social Sciences that specifically consider the role of consumption in forging how consumers experience city life. Contributors are asked to critically engage with the city in all its disparate forms and to do so through empirical or theoretical contributions that shed light on how cities are compelled to balance the tensions between the “authentic” and the inauthentic.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international open access peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences including anthropology, criminology, economics, education, geography, history, law, linguistics, political science, psychology, social policy, social work, sociology and related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to facilitate the interaction and communication between different social scientific disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles as well as shorter Research Notes or short articles, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
