

Special Issue

Systemism and International Studies

Message from the Guest Editors

Systemism is an approach that emphasizes completeness and logical consistency in developing explanations within the social sciences. An essential element in that quest involves the use of graphics to accompany arguments that appear in a text. Systemist figures are created in line with criteria from educational psychology; low barriers to entry and a high degree of commensurability are just some of the major advantages associated with this approach. The contributions in this Special Issue show the value of the systemist diagrams in moving forward the analysis of a wide range of topics. Subject matter includes international organizations and conflict, migration, civil war, and women and terrorism.
