

Special Issue

Children's Services and Intergenerational Relationships

Message from the Guest Editor

Intergenerational programs are becoming increasingly important sites of interactions for children, young people and older adults. Intergenerational programs provide learning opportunities, care and social support for children and older adults in the same setting, at the same time. The purpose of this Special Issue is to invite papers that explore and investigate the idea of children's services and intergenerational relationships in different contexts and from various perspectives. We welcome contributions from all the social sciences including social work, social policy, sociology, anthropology, pedagogy, psychology, history, philosophy, and law, together with interdisciplinary papers. Articles might have theoretically and methodologically diverse approaches, and can cover the idea of intergenerational relationships in children's services from conceptual, empirical, policy and/or practice perspectives.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international open access peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences including anthropology, criminology, economics, education, geography, history, law, linguistics, political science, psychology, social policy, social work, sociology and related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to facilitate the interaction and communication between different social scientific disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles as well as shorter Research Notes or short articles, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
