Creating Resilient Societies in a Changing World

Message from the Guest Editors

In today's changing world, individuals face complex challenges in areas such as technology, education, society, and international relations. A multidimensional approach is required to address these challenges. Technological innovation must be combined with vigorous ethical frameworks and inclusive policies. Education must become more adaptive and accessible, integrating technology to personalize learning and foster globally required competencies. Social efforts should promote equity, build digital resilience, and foster community cohesion. Cooperation and multilateralism are vital at the international level to tackle common issues such as international business success, climate change, and cyber security. By addressing these challenges with comprehensive and collaborative approaches, societies can seize the potential of change to build a more inclusive and sustainable future.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international, open access, peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences, including anthropology, economics, law, linguistics, education, geography, history, political science, psychology, sociology, and other related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to encourage creative, innovative, and critical reflections across social science disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles, shorter Research Notes or articles, as well as Special Issue submissions, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
