Sexual Violence in University Settings

Message from the Guest Editors

The aim of this Special Issue is to analyse the complex subject of sexual violence in universities. Using different approaches and methodologies, we seek to deepen our knowledge and understanding of this phenomenon as a basis for designing public policies, programmes and projects for its prevention. Given the persistence of a culture of silence and minimisation of violence, an intervention is needed that combines prevention, care, and justice focused on victims. Such an intervention would ideally involve using qualitative methods to collect subjective experiences, analysing the role of academic and administrative staff, including trans and non-binary people as a study population, and incorporating public health and human rights approaches.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Social Sciences is an international, open access, peer-reviewed journal publishing the latest research across all disciplines of the social sciences, including anthropology, economics, law, linguistics, education, geography, history, political science, psychology, sociology, and other related areas. The journal is especially interested in interdisciplinary research, and aims to encourage creative, innovative, and critical reflections across social science disciplines. The journal welcomes conventional length articles, shorter Research Notes or articles, as well as Special Issue submissions, as long as they meet the journal's standards of quality and originality.
