Software Security for Future Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

Software security is gaining more and more attention from society. Security is one of the fundamental requirements for software to protect the property and privacy of users. This Special Issue welcomes novel theoretical contributions, practical research, and review articles that aim to address the software security issues. Potential topics include, but are not limited to, the following:

- software security
- application security and privacy
- cyber physical system security
- internet of things system security
- security and privacy analysis tools
- blockchain and distributed system security
- autonomous driving system security
- program analysis

Welcome to contribute your excellent work to our Special Issue!
