Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The bioeconomy is made up of those parts of the economy that use renewable terrestrial and aquatic biological resources, such as forests, fish, and wildlife, to produce food, building materials, energy, medicine, and other essential items. It includes forestry and wood production, with the related biotechnological, chemical and energy industries, but also the provision of other ecosystem services that can support sustainable economic growth.

Therefore, the purpose of the Special Issue will be to bring together scholars interested in the broadly understood bioeconomy, circular economy, agroforestry, climate change and sustainability.

- Progress towards a sustainable bioeconomy;
- Good practices to operate the bioeconomy within safe ecological limits;
- Benefits of biodiversity in primary production;
- Circular economy;
- Agroforestry and its benefits;
- Climate change;
- Nonwood forest products;
- Constructing relations with the business environment (including customers);
- Education of stakeholders;
- Eco-innovations;
- Ecological trends in consumer behaviours.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international open access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. The journal publishes original research articles, reviews, conference proceedings (peer reviewed full articles) and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
