Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The future of mountain regions strongly depends on what happens outside the mountain ranges; local solutions must be implemented. Most challenges, such as over-tourism, agricultural policies and mobility, are due to processes and developments that originate from the outside. Considering geographic interrelationships is crucial for understanding cause and effect.

Contributions are welcome, but not limited to, the works presenting implemented projects and activities in the framework of smart and socio-ecological transformations, dealing with local/community and regional development, governance and political sciences.
