Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to better understand how sustainability issues, also referred to as environmental, social, and governance (ESG) issues, are (or not) affected during crises and beyond. It also aims to understand the impact of these sustainability issues on corporations and their industries during crises and beyond. We are interested in understanding the impacts and implications at different levels.

This Special Issue aims to invite submissions of high-quality articles on topics related to the above issues to gain a better understanding of how sustainability issues are (or being) affected during and after different types of crises or distressed situations. This could provide useful insights on the way forward to more efficiently deal with future crises.
