Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue (SI) welcomes the submission of conceptual frameworks, modelling approaches, case studies, and reviews to support an integrated understanding of the challenges that financial markets face in attempts to contribute to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The topics relevant to this Special Issue include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Experiences on innovative SDG-related financial instruments in the field of green and sustainable finance (e.g., socially responsible investments (SRI), green and social bonds, ethical banking, and microfinance)
- Portfolio selection approaches boosting thematic-related SDGs
- Multicriteria and multi-objective optimization models integrating sustainability concerns
- The role of financial institutions (for example, central banks, commercial and investments banks, insurance companies, or asset management funds) in the implementation of the Agenda 2030
- Measurement of financial asset's sustainability and/or performance
- Risk management stemming from climate change and social issues
