Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic severely affected the shipping industry. Maritime logistics and port management are the mechanisms that boost the economy, which are receiving increasing attention from many sectors. The pandemic has created an unprecedented challenge to maritime logistics and port management worldwide. Research has explored the operation of maritime logistics and port management post pandemic. This Special Issue in Sustainability aims to publish state-of-the-art research on maritime logistics and port management in the post-pandemic era.

The scope of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to, the following topics:

Port management; Port governance; The resilience of maritime logistics and ports post pandemic; Maritime and port sustainability; Dynamics of port production and operation; Maritime logistics risk management; Port economics; Container positioning in liner shipping; Optimization for maritime logistics and port management; Maritime network analysis; Dynamics of maritime shipping network.
