Message from the Guest Editor

For this SI, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) broad themes that see biodiversity as a scientific thread. Contributions that look at plant biodiversity on the ecological level in both mountain and lowland spaces are welcome, as are contributions related to the economic, environmental, and social role of biodiversity of agricultural interest, both of plants and animals. Scientific contributions aimed at the chemical, nutritional and nutraceutical characterization of genetic resources will also be appreciated, with particular regard to processes for the enhancement of species, ecotypes, varieties, microorganisms, and breeds that are underutilized or at risk of genetic erosion/extinction.

This Special Issue invites the international scientific community to contribute to aggregating knowledge and new methodological acquisitions but also to represent a model for initiating project collaborations.
