Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- The use of social media for informal education of sustainable land use;
- Artificial intelligence and fuzzy logic as research methods for exploring informal education of sustainable land use via social media;
- The effectiveness of social media for promoting sustainable land use practices;
- The role of social media influencers in promoting sustainable land use;
- The impact of social media on attitudes toward sustainable land use;
- The use of social media analytics to measure the impact of informal education on sustainable land use practices;
- The challenges and opportunities of using social media for informal education of sustainable land use;

We welcome original research articles, reviews, and case studies that address these themes and all related topics. We look forward to receiving contributions from researchers from a range of disciplinary backgrounds, including environmental science, education, communication, and computer science.
