Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

New tourism and transport infrastructure, new attractions and tourism products have been created, and cultural and natural heritage resources are being increasingly utilized in tourism for local and regional development. All this has created a need to discuss and critically evaluate transport infrastructure, accessibility and other issues linked to growing tourism sectors.

We would like to know how transport transforms tourist destinations in contemporary world. We hope that sustainable tourism and sustainable transport to and within tourist destinations could be considered as a new way of thinking and practising tourism.

This Special Issue calls for theoretical, methodological, and empirical case studies illustrating the diversity of the role of transport infrastructure in sustainable tourism development, transport and accessibility changes, transitions and formations that influence, guide and control tourism development in different temporal and spatial scales and settings.
