Message from the Guest Editors

To cope with the environmental, societal, and economic challenges of energy systems, while exploring the opportunities of recent advances in science and technology, this Special Issue aims to serve as a platform for energy researchers to present their recent works that contribute to deriving sustainable future energy systems. Both theoretical and practical research on technologies, analysis, and designs, which address the sustainability, complexity, efficiency, and resiliency of future energy systems, are welcome. Special attention will be given to studies on emerging technologies, such as machine learning and artificial intelligence, distributed ledger technologies, etc., for solving emergent challenges on the cybersecurity and resilience of energy systems under cyberattacks and natural disasters, which have not been accounted for in other Special Issues.
